DEAN OF FACULTIES

I teach courses in communication, conflict, and group collaboration.

Funds from the Montague-CTE award have supported the design, organization, and execution of public dialogues on persistent local problems (e.g., economic insecurity, student-homeowner conflicts, and campus race relations).

Stakeholders share dinner together, learn about the nature of these problems and what is already being done to address them, and work through student-facilitated group discussions to think about how to leverage our separate resources to create positive change.

Encouraging the Difficult Conversation

Difficult Dialogues is an initiative that is open to anybody in the campus community to come and have a conversation about race relations. It started with the idea that some students and faculty experience racism on A&M's campus and other students are very unaware it is happening.
